

Berry TraX

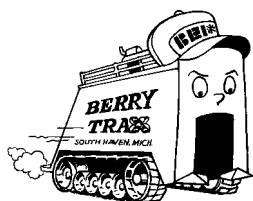

BEI announces a new addition to its self-propelled berry harvester line up. BEI has taken three years of ideas and engineering to produce a machine with several unique advantages. Berry Trax, as the name implies, uses a track rather than wheels to propel the harvester through the field. The track has a ground contact three times that of a conventional wheeled machine. This means less ground compaction and above that it means that the machine can go where no other machine has gone before. Another advantage of track drive is that the machine can “power rotate”. This means that it takes less room to turn the Berry Trax machine around at the end of the row.

The Berry Trax harvester uses state-of-the-art “drive by wire” hydraulics. Unlike other track machines such as bulldozers that use levers to steer and control the machine, Berry Trax uses a conventional steering wheel and a Forward/Reverse lever such as is found on BEI’s other self-propelled harvesters. Therefore just about anyone can learn to drive Berry Trax with little training. Road speed on this harvester is engaged with a switch on the control panel, there are no other levers to push or pull. The harvester has 14 inches of lift for varying field conditions.

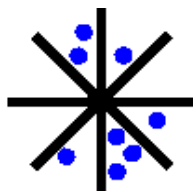

Berry Trax has several other advantages. The machine’s overall width is less than 8 ft 6 in, which means that it can be hauled down the road without permits. There is “on board” empty lug storage for over 60 lugs. The machine weighs significantly less than self-propelled wheeled machines.

The harvesting system of Berry Trax is the same as that of a wheeled machine. It has a standard full size tunnel with the same picking, conveying, and blower systems as our other harvesters. Therefore, Berry Trax picks the same high quality fruit as does all BEI harvesters.

There are so many other things that can be said about the advantages of Berry Trax, but there is limited space on a page. Contact us today to find out what Berry Trax can do for you.

Berry TraX

Berry growers have said the BEI harvesters were built like an Army Tank. Well, they were right!!! BEI introduces Berry TraX with many new features including go any where track drive.
